BABY TOSSES MOTHER'S CLOTHING TO JANITOR

Special to The Washington Herald.

New York, Sept. 5.—Roland Rosenberg is 3 years old and an early rier. Yesterday morning his mother, Mrs. Ida Rosenberg, did not get up when she heard Roland pattering about the apartment at 6:30 a. m.

Delighted squeals finally aroused her. They came from Roland, who was perched precariously on the window sill throwing out what was handiest. At that precise moment his mother's kimono was handiest. Peering from the window, Mrs. Rosenberg discovered the courtyard littered with various other articles of apparel. In the midst of the downpour stood Charles Greenleaf, porter of the building.

A dinner ring, an "umbrella" ring and other pieces of jewelry which she had wrapped in her clothing on retiring were not to be found. Greenleaf, charged with stealing them, was held for examination in the Washington Heights Court.

NEW YORK'S SALVATION UP TO "MA" SUNDAY

Special to The Washington Herald.

New York, Sept. 5.—"It's up to Ma!" That's the dictum Billy Sunday, acrobatic evangelist, roared back from the platform of a train bound for Winona Lake, Ind., yesterday, when the committee that had steered him around New York and the porters and others around the Pennsylvania Terminal wanted to know for certain whether he would come to fight Gotham's ghosts of evil next winter.

"I'll let you know when Ma's thought it over."

"Ma" was a bit critical of New York. Not that she didn't think it had enough to be worthy of even Billy's prowess. She nodded agreement when her husband shouted, with a few choice samples from his well known list of gestures that New York people were "going to hell in bunches." But while fast along the downward path they are, she thinks, too slow in making arrangements for Billy Sunday to come after them.

This dispatch solves one of the most puzzling mysteries of the sea brought about by the war. It is the first definite news of the cruiser's destruction.

Eluding the allied warships for four months, the Karlsruhe was second only to the famous Emden in adventurous exploits, sinking a number of French and British merchantmen. Within a few weeks after she steamed out of Mexican waters, where she was stationed when the war began, she was known and feared the world over, a terror of the sea.

At first, it was supposed that the woman was stopping at the hotel. She had been seen by attaches wandering through the upper hallways and the station of the manager, Harry Cavanaugh, had been called to her actions, but before there was an opportunity to investigate she leaped to her death.

The first clue to her identity was found in the slip of paper which bore the name of Mrs. Irene Landes, a Far Rockaway address and telephone number of Evergreen Cottage in Far Rockaway.

Capt. Dempsey, of the West Sixty-eighth street station, communicated by telephone with the cottage. A woman who answered the call became hysterical when she realized that something serious had occurred. A man who said he was Frederick Nathan, took her place at the phone and listened to a careful description of the woman. He said he was positive she was his sister, Mrs. Landes. He arranged to view the body in the West Sixty-eighth street station.

A clever piece of robbery was successfully accomplished some time between 11 o'clock Monday night and 8 o'clock yesterday morning when $300 was taken from the safe of the Song Shop at Ninth and D streets northwest, located in a section of the city strongly covered by burglar police, special officers and night watchmen.

Frank L. Wetherbee, manager of the shop, told the police that the thief after entering the cellar pried open the trap door between the cellar and the ground floor, which was well lighted. Detective Sergt. Messer, of the central office force, is working on the case.

DETAIN ROUMANIAN ENVOY.

Bulgarians Halt Minister as Retaliatory Measure.

Berlin (via Sayville), Sept. 5.—The Budapest newspaper Az-Est publishes a report from Sofia to the effect that the Roumanian minister to Bulgaria is being detained by the Bulgarian government because of alleged bad treatment of the Bulgarian minister, M. Radov, in Bucharest at the hands of the Roumanian authorities.

Radov, it is asserted, was not allowed to leave his legation. The Swiss minister at Bucharest endeavored to visit Radov but was forbidden to do so by the Roumanian authorities.

SENATE HITS BOYCOTT IN DRASTIC MEASURE

Empowers President to Use Navy Against Offending Vessels.

Legislation of the most drastic character, that will permit of retaliation and reprisals against the allies and effectually stop the British blacklist policy was written into the general revenue bill by the Senate yesterday afternoon.

The amendment proposed by Senator Thomas, of Colorado, and adopted without dissent, empowers the President to refuse clearance papers to any belligerent merchantmen that refuses American goods unless, and only, because of lack of cargo space. An attempt to sail without clearance is made punishable by heavy fine and imprisonment of two years. The ship may be seized by the government.

The amendment, it was admitted, was prepared with the approval of the State Department. This admission is especially significant in view of the provision "that the President is hereby authorized and empowered to employ such part of the naval forces of the United States as shall be necessary to carry out the purpose of this act."

The application of this power to use naval vessels in enforcing the act would mean the virtual blockading of our own coasts by our own warships to prevent the escape of the allied ships that had been refused clearance papers.

The Thomas amendment is admittedly an emergency measure. Nobody attempted to conceal the fact that it was aimed at the acts of the British government. The Senate has been informed that every diplomatic effort of this government to bring about relief for American citizens subjected to the blacklist proved futile. The approval of the State Department is accepted as proof of a determination on the part of the administration to begin an aggressive policy to protect the rights of American and other neutral commerce.

To Make Issue of Rail Trouble.

From this time forward, he proposes to hammer away on the lines he marked out last night. He will do all in his power to make an issue of the strike settlement. He is up in arms and in a fighting mood, and whatever else may be the result of the campaign, it seems now that a fine old fight is in prospect.

That part of Kentucky which is represented by Lexington turned out today and gave the candidate a good old-fashioned welcome. Louisville did not do so, as Lexington, for notwithstanding that announcement, had made up his mind to speak there, when the party arrived at 8 a. m. there was no band, no crowd, and no arrangements for any speech.

Hughes was frankly mad. He at least was not to speak there. But, in a few minutes, along came A. T. Hart, himself a Kentuckian, who is in charge of the Chicago Republican national headquarters, with the explanation that no meeting had been intended for Louisville.

"I didn't want to spoil the Lexington rally," said he.

That mollified Hughes a little. Then along came the Hughes and Fairbanks Club of Louisville, headed by a band, and en route for the Lexington rally. A crowd gathered, the movie men got busy, and the entire cordial between Mr. Hughes and his campaign managers was restored.

Attacks Spirit of Force.

Lexington was reached at 11 o'clock and a crowd of several thousand whooped it up for their fellow Kentuckian, Hart, with Hughes cheers as a chaser.

The speaking at the Auditorium this afternoon filled the big hall with 300 enthusiasts, and outside there was another overflow meeting of 2,000, which Hughes later addressed.

After extolling the character of Lincoln, Hughes said in part:

"No American feels a stranger to him because of his greatness. He is brought here to us all. He is kin to the humblest because he interpreted the spirit of the plain people."

"What is that spirit? It is the spirit of reasonableness; of fairness; of generous thought and judgment; it is a spirit which repudiates the demand of oppression, of tyranny, and of force."

"We have a new spirit abroad in these recent days in America. It is a spirit that demands legislation in advance of investigation. It is the spirit that says: 'Legislate now and investigate afterwards.'"

"It is the spirit of force. It is not American."

had the interstate commerce act, the safety appliances act, the hours of service act, the Federal employers' liability act, the meat inspection act, the pure food and drugs act, the Hepburn amendment controlling rates under the interstate commerce act, and there was the amendment of 1910 to the interstate commerce act.

"A very long series of what might be called progressive legislation of a very important character," he concluded, with an ironical smile.

The Republican nominee seems at last to have gotten in the full spirit of the fight.

It is simple justice to accord to him the victory in a very difficult situation last night, when a riot was imminent. But, by force of lung power, combined with splendid suavity and a generous measure of common sense, Hughes not only defeated a hearing from the crowd, more than 100,000 people, but had two-thirds of them up on the platform after his strong finish, struggling to grasp his hand.

The disturbance was only of local note. Nobody expected him to carry Tennessee. He had the effect of the speech he laughed in the heart of the crowd, after he had felt the sting of union labor ostracism, and had heard the rasp of Democratic hisses, is something to be calculated upon.

For good or ill, Hughes has committed himself to the Adamson settlement of the impending railroad strike. Though the bill bears Adamson's name, Hughes holds Wilson directly responsible. Hughes specifically believes that Wilson has tricked the organized labor for political purposes. Hughes specifically believes that American institutions have been injured by recourse to force instead of reason.

From this time forward, he proposes to hammer away on the lines he marked out last night. He will do all in his power to make an issue of the strike settlement. He is up in arms and in a fighting mood, and whatever else may be the result of the campaign, it seems now that a fine old fight is in prospect.

PARK VIEW CITIZENS PLAN COMMUNITY WEEK

Will Celebrate Improvement Features Recently Completed.

The "steering" committee of the Park View Citizens' Association met last night at the home of John G. McGrath, president of the association, and adopted plans for a community celebration from October 2 to 7, of the completion of the new Park View School and the paving of Georgia avenue, to be submitted today to the Board of Education for its approval.

The tentative program follows: First night, dedication of school building by Board of Education; automobile parade; second night, reception to be Commissioners of the District of Columbia; third night, reception to the Board of Education and school officials; fourth night, reception to civic organizations; fifth night, community celebration and awarding of prizes in the lawns and yards contest.

On one evening during the celebration it is planned to have a community parade. A band has been organized in the neighborhood and will furnish music during the week. This band will not disband after the community week, but will continue as a Park View orchestra.

The meeting was attended by all members of the committee, who enthusiastically took part in the work. The association is in excellent condition, financially, and already has a large fund subscribed for the contemplated week of celebration.

SISTER'S DEAD VOICE CALLS HER TO GRAVE

Special to The Washington Herald.

New York, Sept. 5.—Thomas Purcell, a stationary engineer, of Williamsburg, has appealed to the police to help him find his wife, Florence, who disappeared last Saturday ostensibly while on a trip to her sister's grave in the Cypress Hills Cemetery.

"Sister has been calling me to go to her grave ever since she died," Mrs. Purcell told her husband just before going away. "I'm sure it's Carrie. She wants me badly and I must hurry up and go to her."

Mrs. Purcell's sister, Mrs. Carrie Rackbach, died three months ago and ever since she has been melancholy.

PLAN TO SEND GUARD TO BORDER NEXT WEEK

Heavy Recruiting Staff Will Be Left in Washington.

Plans are being made to send the three units of the District National Guard still at the mobilization camp to the border within a week, it was learned at Camp Ordway yesterday.

Brig. Gen. William E. Harvey stated yesterday that it was possible that orders would be received within twenty-four hours.

The tentative date for departure has been set as the early part of next week, it is said.

The men and officers consider the assignment of a large recruiting staff to Washington as an indication that the troops will move soon. Three majors, three captains, five sergeants, four corporals, and five privates will be left behind in Washington when the troops move to the recruiting.

Col. Glendie B. Young, of the Third Infantry, has not yet decided upon the personnel of the infantry share of the detail, but stated that the men who were needed at home by their families because of sickness or other reasons were being considered in addition to their effectiveness as recruiting agents.
